

Deuteronomy 9:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Yet they are thy people and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm.

Analysis

Yet they are thy people and thine inheritance (נָכְלָתֶךָ, nachalatekha)—Moses concludes his intercessory prayer by appealing to God's covenant ownership of Israel. The term nachalah (inheritance) emphasizes that Israel belongs to Yahweh by election, not merit—they are His treasured possession (Exodus 19:5). Thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm recalls the exodus redemption: God's investment in Israel through the plagues and Red Sea crossing becomes Moses's argument for their preservation.

This verse captures the theology of intercession: Moses pleads not Israel's righteousness (which he's just demolished in ch. 9:4-24) but God's reputation and covenant faithfulness. Paul applies similar logic in Romans 8:32—if God gave His Son, how will He not freely give us all things? Christ is our greater Mediator who intercedes based on His own redemptive work.

Historical Context

Moses prayed this during the 40-day fast on Mount Sinai after Israel's golden calf apostasy (Exodus 32-34). He interceded to prevent God's judgment and preserve the covenant people. This prayer exemplifies the mediatorial role that prefigures Christ's high priestly ministry.

1. How does Moses's appeal to God's redemptive investment in Israel inform how we pray based on Christ's finished work?
2. What does it mean that believers are God's 'inheritance' (Ephesians 1:18), and how should this shape our identity?
