

Ecclesiastes 3:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

Analysis

All go unto one place (כָּל הַלְּגָעָה אֶל-מָקוֹם אֶחָד), hakol holekh el-maqom echad)—Sheol, the realm of the dead, or simply the grave. All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again directly echoes God's curse in Genesis 3:19 עַפְرָתָךְ אַתָּה וְאַל-עַפְרָתָךְ, afar attah ve'el-afar tashuv—'dust you are, and to dust you shall return').

This verse couldn't be clearer in its memento mori force—death is the great equalizer, returning all flesh to its elemental origin. Theologically, this underscores humanity's fallen condition: death wasn't original to creation but entered through sin. Yet Qoheleth observes only the physical reality, not yet revealing the resurrection hope. The 'one place' of death awaits all, making earthly distinctions temporary and demanding we seek permanence beyond mortality. As Job declared (19:26), redemption must come from God alone, since dust cannot save itself.

Historical Context

Ancient Israelites understood Sheol as a shadowy underworld where all the dead gathered, regardless of righteousness—a concept refined only gradually through progressive revelation, culminating in Jesus's teaching about heaven and hell.
