

Ecclesiastes 7:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

All this have I proved by wisdom: I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me.

Analysis

All this have I proved by wisdom (כָּל־זֶה נִסִּיתִי בַחֲכָמָה, kol-zoh nissiti bachokhmah) —'all this I have tested/examined through wisdom,' from nasah (to test, try, prove). I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me (אָמַרְתִּי אֶחְכָּמָה וְהָיָא רְחוּקָה מִמֶּנִּי, amarti echkamah vehi rechokah mimmenni)—'I said I will become wise, but it was distant from me.' The verb echkamah is the reflexive form, 'I will make myself wise.'

After chapters of wisdom observations, Qoheleth confesses his own project's ultimate failure: despite rigorous examination (nissiti, systematic testing), true wisdom remained elusive. This isn't false modesty but epistemological honesty—human wisdom has limits. The phrase 'I will be wise' reveals the ambition; 'it was far from me' acknowledges the gap between aspiration and achievement. This anticipates Paul's 'the foolishness of God is wiser than men' (1 Corinthians 1:25). The wisest man concludes by admitting wisdom's depths exceed human grasp, preparing for the ultimate revelation: 'Christ Jesus, who became to us wisdom from God' (1 Corinthians 1:30).

Historical Context

Solomon pursued wisdom more systematically than perhaps any figure in history (1 Kings 4:29-34), yet concluded wisdom's essence remained elusive. This reflects the biblical pattern that human achievement, however great, cannot reach God's level.
