

Ecclesiastes 7:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I find more bitter than death the woman, whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands: whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.

Analysis

And I find more bitter than death the woman (וּמוֹצֵא אֲנִי מֵרַמְמוֹת אֶת־הָאִשָּׁה, umotse ani mar mimmavet et-ha'ishah)—'and I find bitter beyond death the woman.' Whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands (אֲשֶׁר־הִיא אֲשֶׁר־הִיא מְצֻדִים וְחֶרֶמִּים לְבָהּ אֲסוּרִים יָדֶיהָ, asher-hi metsodim vacharamim libbah asurim yadeha)—whose heart is traps and nets, whose hands are fetters. Whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her (טוֹב לִפְנֵי הָאֱלֹהִים יִמָּלֵט מִמֶּנָּה וְחֹטֵא יִלְכָּד בָּהּ, tov lifnei ha'elohim yimmalet mimmenah vechote yillakhed bah).

This controversial verse requires careful interpretation. The definite article 'the woman' (ha'ishah) suggests a specific type, not womankind generally—likely the adulteress/seductress of Proverbs 2:16-19, 5:3-14, 7:10-27. The hunting imagery (metsodim—traps, charamim—nets, asurim—fetters) depicts calculated ensnaring. The conclusion is key: the righteous man (tov lifnei ha'elohim, 'good before God') escapes through divine protection, while chote (the sinner) falls prey. This isn't misogyny but warning against sexual temptation, echoing Joseph fleeing Potiphar's wife (Genesis 39:12). Proverbs 31 celebrates the excellent wife—Ecclesiastes warns against her opposite.

Historical Context

Ancient Israelite wisdom literature frequently personified both Wisdom and Folly as women (Proverbs 1-9), using feminine imagery pedagogically. Temple prostitution in surrounding cultures made sexual temptation a pervasive danger requiring explicit warning.

Study Questions

1. How does recognizing sexual temptation as 'more bitter than death' shape appropriate boundaries and vigilance?
2. What does it mean practically that the righteous 'escape' through pleasing God rather than mere willpower?
3. How should this warning be taught today without falling into misogyny or dismissing its serious counsel?
