

Esther 7:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified.

Analysis

---

Haman executed: 'So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified'. Haman's execution on the very gallows (75 feet high, Esther 5:14) he built for Mordecai demonstrates perfect poetic justice and divine retribution. Psalm 7:15-16 teaches that the wicked fall into pits they dig for others—Haman embodies this principle. The king's wrath being 'pacified' shows justice satisfying royal anger, though deeper redemption requires the counter-decree of Esther 8. Haman's death foreshadows Satan's ultimate defeat—the enemy seeking to destroy God's people ultimately destroyed by his own devices.

Historical Context

Ancient execution by hanging or impalement was public spectacle demonstrating royal justice and warning against similar crimes. That Haman died on the specific structure he prepared for Mordecai added dramatic irony recognized by ancient audiences. Seventy-five feet height (50 cubits, Esther 5:14) made the execution highly visible throughout Susa. Archaeological evidence shows ancient Near Eastern kingdoms used public execution for political crimes, both as punishment and deterrence. The reversal of Haman's plot—from planning Jewish genocide to being executed while Mordecai is honored—demonstrates God's justice and providence. Jewish celebration of Purim commemorates this deliverance annually.

Study Questions

1. How does Haman's execution on his own gallows illustrate divine justice and the principle that evil rebounds on evildoers?
2. What does this reversal teach about God's sovereignty protecting His covenant people from seemingly unstoppable threats?
