

Exodus 1:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

Analysis

Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty (וַיַּטֵּב אֱלֹהִים לַמִּיֻּלְדוֹת, vayeitev Elohim lameyaldot)—God dealt well is divine approval and blessing on their civil disobedience rooted in the fear of God. The verb (וַיַּטֵּב, yataav, "do good/treat favorably") contrasts with Pharaoh's evil treatment. The result: the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty—the exact opposite of Pharaoh's intention (1:10). This demonstrates a consistent biblical principle: God blesses those who honor Him over human authority. The midwives' faith produced national blessing, as individual righteousness often does (Genesis 18:26-32).

Historical Context

Divine blessing often manifests in tangible ways—prosperity, protection, and multiplication. The connection between the midwives' obedience and Israel's continued growth emphasizes that national survival depended on individual faithfulness. God's "dealing well" with them inspired continued resistance and preserved the generation that would experience the Exodus.
