

Exodus 12:40

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.

Analysis

The precise timeframe '430 years' fulfills God's prophecy to Abraham (Genesis 15:13 says '400 years,' which is rounded). The phrase 'the selfsame day' emphasizes God's perfect timing—not 429 or 431 years, but exactly as predicted. This exact fulfillment establishes God's reliability in all prophetic promises. Human calendars may vary, but divine timing is perfect.

Historical Context

The 430 years likely dated from Jacob's entry into Egypt or from God's covenant with Abraham, depending on calculation methods. Various Jewish and Christian scholars interpret the starting point differently.

Study Questions

1. How does God's precise fulfillment of the 430-year timeframe strengthen your confidence in unfulfilled prophecies?

2. What does 'the selfsame day' teach about God's sovereignty over historical timing and His meticulous care?
