

Exodus 16:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake to day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

Analysis

This is that which the LORD hath said, To morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD—Moses explains the double portion by introducing Sabbath (שַׁבָּת, shabbat, 'rest, cessation'). The definite article 'the rest' indicates a specific, known concept even before Sinai's formal commandment, linking to creation's seventh day (Gen 2:2-3). The Sabbath is 'holy' (קָדֵשׁ, qodesh) and 'unto the LORD,' emphasizing its sacred character and divine ownership. The command to 'bake' and 'seethe' (boil) today for tomorrow's eating requires Sabbath preparation, teaching that rest requires forethought. This prefigures believers who rest in Christ's completed work, having prepared through faith.

Historical Context

This introduces Sabbath observance before the formal giving of the Ten Commandments at Sinai, showing rest as gift before law, grace before demand.

Study Questions

1. How does Sabbath as 'rest unto the LORD' differ from merely taking a day off?
2. What preparation does spiritual rest require, and how does Christ's work provide it?
