

Exodus 17:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

Analysis

And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD—The dual name memorializes Israel's sin: Massah (מָסָה, 'testing') and Meribah (מִרְיָבָה, 'strife, contention'). Their 'chiding' (רִיב, riv, legal contention) and tempting (נָסָה, nasah, putting to trial) mark the place permanently. The question they asked—'Is the LORD among us, or not?'—constitutes the ultimate tempting: demanding proof despite continuous miracles (Red Sea, manna, pillar of cloud/fire). This question reveals unbelief's core: requiring new evidence daily despite mountains of previous proof. Christ condemns this: 'An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign' (Matt 12:39). Psalm 95:8 warns future generations: 'Harden not your heart, as in...Meribah.'

Historical Context

The naming of places after Israel's failures served as permanent memorial and warning. Massah and Meribah became proverbial for unbelief (Ps 95:8, Heb 3:8).

Study Questions

1. How does the question 'Is the LORD among us?' after continuous miracles reveal unbelief's nature?
2. What does permanently naming the place after sin teach about the seriousness of tempting God?
