

Exodus 18:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee.

Analysis

And let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge—Jethro's organizational plan establishes distributed justice: routine cases handled locally, exceptional cases escalated to Moses. The phrase 'at all seasons' (בְּכָל־עֵת, b'khol-ét) means continuous availability—justice isn't occasional but constant. The distinction between 'great matter' (דָּבָר הַגָּדוֹל, davar hagadol) and 'small matter' (דָּבָר־קָטָן, davar-qaton) requires wisdom to discern what requires higher authority. The benefit 'so shall it be easier for thyself' addresses Moses' burden, while 'they shall bear the burden with thee' implements burden-sharing. This delegation doesn't diminish Moses' authority but extends it through subordinates, modeling Christ's distribution of ministry through the church (Eph 4:11-12).

Historical Context

This judicial hierarchy became the pattern for Israel's governance throughout their history. Local judges handled routine matters; exceptional cases reached national leaders (cf. Deut 1:9-18).

1. How does delegation that retains final authority differ from abdication?
2. What does 'bearing burden with thee' teach about shared ministry versus solitary hero leadership?
