

Exodus 19:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

Analysis

So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

Moses obeys immediately—no argument, no delay. 'Went down' (וַיֵּרָד, vayered) and 'spoke' (וַיֹּמַר, vayomer) show prompt compliance. The verse's brevity emphasizes action over words—Moses is a doer, not merely a hearer. He descends to deliver God's warning before ascending again with Aaron. This constant up-down movement dramatizes mediation's exhausting work—standing between holy God and sinful people, bringing words down and prayers up. Moses' faithful transmission of warnings saves lives—obedience in leadership protects those led. The people's safety depends on Moses' fidelity. The verse bridges chapter 19's theophany to chapter 20's law—Moses prepares them to hear God's voice.

Historical Context

Moses' repeated ascents and descents of Sinai (at least seven times) physically demonstrated his mediatorial role. Ancient readers would appreciate the exhausting physical labor involved in these climbs, underscoring Moses' dedication.
