

Exodus 2:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

Analysis

And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink (וַתִּקְחָהּ לֹו תֵבַת גֹּמֶא, vatiqach-lo tevat gome)—Ark (תֵּבָה, tevah) is the same word used only for Noah's ark (Genesis 6-9), deliberately evoking salvation through water by God's providence. Bulrushes (גֹּמֶא, gome, papyrus reeds) and waterproofing (חֶמֶר וָזָפֶת, chemar vazafet, "pitch and bitumen") show careful preparation. Jochebed doesn't abandon Moses—she strategically places him where Pharaoh's daughter bathes (v. 5), a calculated act of faith. The flags (סִוִּף, suf, reeds) will later name the Red Sea (yam suf), linking Moses' salvation to Israel's deliverance.

Historical Context

Papyrus reeds (Cyperus papyrus) grew abundantly in the Nile Delta. Egyptian nobility bathed in secluded river spots with attendants. Jochebed's plan relied on Egyptian custom and maternal compassion—principles transcending culture. The ark's construction shows resourcefulness and courage under genocide's threat.

Study Questions

1. How does the "ark" imagery connect Moses' salvation to Noah's and anticipate Israel's Red Sea deliverance?
2. What does Jochebed's strategic faith—acting wisely while trusting God for results—teach about balancing human responsibility and divine providence?
