

Exodus 20:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

Analysis

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

The first command governing human relationships addresses family—society's foundation. 'Honour' (קָבַד, kabbed) means 'give weight to,' treat with gravitas, respect. It's heavier than 'obey'—obedience is for children, but honor is lifelong. Adult children honor aging parents by providing care. Paul calls this 'the first commandment with promise' (Ephesians 6:2)—obeying brings blessing. 'Long days on the land' connects obedience to national survival—societies honoring family continuity thrive; those abandoning elders collapse. The land is gift ('which YHWH thy God gives thee')—tenure depends on covenant faithfulness. Christ rebukes using religious excuses to avoid parental support (Mark 7:10-13).

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern cultures valued parental honor, but Israel's command is unique in directly tying national longevity to family honor. Archaeological evidence shows ancient Israel's extended family structures supporting multiple generations.
