

Exodus 20:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou shalt not kill.

Analysis

Thou shalt not kill.

The Hebrew 'lo tirtzach' (לא תרצח) specifically prohibits 'murder' (unlawful killing), not all killing—war, capital punishment, and self-defense aren't banned. The verb 'ratsach' denotes criminal homicide, taking innocent life. Since humans bear God's image (Genesis 9:6), murder assaults divine likeness. Jesus expands this to include hatred and contempt—'whoever is angry with his brother' violates this command (Matthew 5:21-22). The heart's murderous rage is moral equivalent of the hand's deadly blow. John says 'whoever hates his brother is a murderer' (1 John 3:15). The command protects life's sanctity from conception to natural death—abortion, euthanasia, and assisted suicide violate God's image-bearing creatures.

Historical Context

---

Ancient Near Eastern law codes (Hammurabi, Hittite) prohibited murder but with qualifications. Israel's absolute prohibition, grounded in God's image, elevates human life above property or pragmatism.
