

Exodus 21:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

Analysis

Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

The famous formula: exact correspondence between crime and punishment. 'Eye for eye' (עֵין תָּחַת עֵין, ayin tachat ayin) means the punishment fits the crime—no more, no less. This prevents both excessive vengeance and inadequate justice. Rabbinic tradition interpreted this as monetary compensation (paying the value of an eye), showing the law's spirit was restitution, not mutilation. Jesus quotes this in Matthew 5:38 to contrast civil justice with personal forgiveness—governments execute justice; individuals extend mercy. Paul echoes: 'Do not avenge yourselves...let God avenge' (Romans 12:19). God's justice is perfect; our vengeance isn't.

Historical Context

Eye-for-eye wasn't literally practiced in most cases—restitution and fines substituted. The principle established proportionality: punishment must match offense. This protected both victim (justice served) and perpetrator (not over-punished).
