

Exodus 27:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

Analysis

The gate itself: 20 cubits of blue, purple, scarlet, and fine twined linen with needlework—matching the tabernacle's entrance and veil but without cherubim. The colorful, beautiful gate stands out from the plain white courtyard walls, drawing eyes and feet to the entrance. Christ, our Gate, displays heaven (blue), royalty (purple), sacrifice (scarlet), and righteousness (linen). His beauty attracts; His sacrifice enables entry. The needlework suggests the intricate providence weaving His life.

Historical Context

This 20-cubit (30-foot) wide gate hung from four pillars, creating a substantial and striking entrance. The colorful embroidered hanging contrasted dramatically with the plain white linen walls, clearly identifying where worshipers should enter.
