

Exodus 3:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians:
and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

Analysis

---

And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty (וְנָתַתִּי אֶת־חֵן הָעַם־הַזֶּה בְּעֵינֵי) —God promises favour (חֵן, chen, "grace/favor") in Egyptians' eyes. Ye shall not go empty (לֹא תֵלְכוּ רִיקָם) —Israel will receive compensation for their labor. This anticipates 11:2-3 and 12:35-36 when Egyptians give Israel gold, silver, and clothing. This isn't theft but just recompense—wages for 400 years of slavery (cf. Deuteronomy 15:13-14 which requires sending freed slaves away with provision). God ensures His people leave enriched, not impoverished, and these spoils later fund the tabernacle (25:1-7, 35:4-9).

Historical Context

The 'plundering of Egypt' fulfilled Genesis 15:14 ('afterward shall they come out with great substance'). Archaeological evidence shows that slaves rarely possessed wealth; Israel's enrichment reversed their economic devastation. The gold and silver later used for tabernacle construction (Exodus 25-31, 35-40) came from these Egyptian gifts, showing God's providence—even pagan wealth serves His purposes when redirected to worship.

Study Questions

1. How does God's provision of Egyptian wealth to Israel illustrate that He compensates His servants for faithful endurance through suffering?
2. What does the subsequent use of Egyptian gold for the tabernacle teach about redeeming secular resources for sacred purposes?
