

Exodus 32:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

Analysis

Moses confronts Aaron with מָה־עָשָׂה לָךְ הָעָם הַזֶּה (meh-asah lecha ha'am hazeh, What did this people do to you?) suggesting the people pressured Aaron—but leaders are accountable regardless of pressure. The charge כִּי־הֵבֵאתָ עָלָיו חַטָּאת גְּדוֹלָה (ki-heveta alav chata'ah gedolah, that you have brought upon it a great sin) uses the adjective גְּדוֹלָה (gedolah, great) to emphasize the sin's enormity. Moses holds Aaron directly responsible despite popular demand, teaching that spiritual leaders cannot excuse compromise by blaming followers.

Historical Context

Aaron's position as high priest-designate made his failure more egregious. His sons Nadab and Abihu would later offer strange fire (Lev 10), suggesting Aaron's family struggled with taking God's holiness seriously.
