

Exodus 34:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone: and Moses put the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

Analysis

Moses was with God 'forty days and forty nights' without eating or drinking—sustained supernaturally during extended communion with God. He wrote the covenant words (the Decalogue) on tablets. When descending, Moses' face radiated (קָרָן, qaran—shone/had horns of light) from being in God's presence. The verb qaran creates a wordplay: Moses' face had 'horns' (rays) of light from beholding God's glory (2 Cor 3:7-18). This transformation prefigures Christ's transfiguration (Matt 17:2) and our transformation into His image.

Historical Context

This is Moses' third forty-day period on Sinai. The radiance was so intense that Israel feared approaching him, requiring a veil (v. 30-35). Michelangelo's famous statue depicts Moses with horns due to translating qaran literally.

Study Questions

1. How does extended time in God's presence transform you visibly to others?
2. In what ways should believers today reflect Christ's glory through transformation rather than merely external religiosity?
