

Ezekiel 12:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Say, I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: they shall remove and go into captivity.

Analysis

"Say, I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: they shall remove and go into captivity." Ezekiel explicitly declares himself a prophetic sign—his enacted exile foreshadows Israel's actual exile. "Like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them" establishes direct correspondence between symbol and reality. The double description "remove and go into captivity" (ba-golah ba-shevi yelekhu) emphasizes exile's certainty using synonymous terms. This clear interpretation prevents ambiguity—the sign-act's meaning is unmistakable.

Historical Context

Prophetic signs weren't mere illustrations but enacted prophecies participating in bringing about what they depicted. Ezekiel's symbolic exile didn't just predict but began actualizing Jerusalem's coming captivity. When literal exile occurred (586 BC), those who witnessed Ezekiel's performance recognized the connection, validating both the prophet's credentials and God's control over history. The sign-act's fulfillment taught that God's word accomplishes its purpose (Isaiah 55:11).

Study Questions

1. How do prophetic signs differ from mere illustrations or object lessons?
2. What does the direct correspondence (as I have done, so shall it be done) teach about God's word's certainty?
3. In what ways do sacraments function as enacted signs that participate in spiritual realities?
