

Ezekiel 12:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house.

Analysis

"Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house." God diagnoses Israel's problem—willful blindness and deafness. They possess physical faculties ("eyes to see," "ears to hear") but lack spiritual perception. The double designation "rebellious house" (beit meri, בֵּית מְרִי) emphasizes covenant violation as defining characteristic. This echoes Isaiah's commission (Isaiah 6:9-10) and anticipates Jesus' diagnosis of hardened hearts (Matthew 13:13-15). Rebellion produces functional blindness—sin darkens understanding.

Historical Context

The exiles refused to acknowledge their true condition—rebellious covenant violators justly punished. Instead, they blamed circumstances, previous generations, or false gods' power. This self-deception required dramatic prophetic actions to penetrate hardened hearts. Ezekiel's sign-acts created visual, unavoidable proclamation that words alone couldn't accomplish. The designation 'rebellious house' indicted the entire community, not just individuals, showing corporate responsibility for covenant faithfulness.

Study Questions

1. How does willful spiritual blindness differ from intellectual inability to understand?
2. What does the 'rebellious house' designation teach about corporate responsibility for sin?
3. In what ways can religious people today have 'eyes that see not' and 'ears that hear not'?
