

Ezekiel 17:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

Analysis

Riddles and parables were common prophetic teaching methods that required spiritual discernment to understand (Matthew 13:10-17). The Hebrew 'mashal' encompasses proverbs, parables, and allegories. This teaching method reveals truth to receptive hearts while concealing it from the rebellious, demonstrating divine wisdom in communication.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern wisdom literature frequently employed riddles and parables. Israel's prophets adapted this cultural form to communicate covenant truths, engaging audiences intellectually and spiritually.
