

Ezekiel 18:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

Analysis

The principle of individual accountability reaches climax: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son." Each person bears responsibility for their own sin. The phrase "the soul that sinneth" emphasizes personal agency. This doesn't contradict original sin or corporate solidarity but establishes individual judgment. The righteous person's righteousness benefits only themselves; the wicked person's wickedness condemns only themselves. This anticipates the Great White Throne judgment where each gives account personally (Revelation 20:12-13).

Historical Context

This clear statement (591 BC) corrected the exiles' misunderstanding of corporate judgment. While nations and families experience collective consequences, ultimate judgment is individual. Godly Josiah couldn't save Judah from his fathers' wickedness, nor did wicked Manasseh's idolatry doom his repentant son Josiah. Each stood before God based on personal covenant faithfulness. This principle shapes biblical justice—punishment falls on the guilty, not the innocent. While Christ bore our sins as substitute, individuals must personally trust Him for salvation.
