

Ezekiel 18:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

Analysis

"But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die." God offers hope to the wicked through genuine repentance. The phrase "turn from all his sins" emphasizes comprehensive transformation, not selective reformation. True repentance involves both turning from sin and turning to God's statutes. The promise "he shall surely live" guarantees salvation for genuine converts. This demonstrates both God's justice (sin brings death) and mercy (repentance brings life). The gospel offers this hope to all who truly repent.

Historical Context

The exiles (591 BC) needed assurance that genuine repentance would be accepted despite past wickedness. This encouraged hope while maintaining moral seriousness. The principle appears throughout Scripture: God welcomes repentant sinners regardless of past (Luke 15:11-24, 1 Corinthians 6:9-11). However, the repentance must be genuine—comprehensive turning from sin, not mere regret. This shaped Christian understanding of conversion: radical transformation through faith and repentance, not gradual self-improvement.
