

Ezekiel 18:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

Analysis

'Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.' The flip side: a wicked person can repent and find life. 'Turneth away' (Hebrew shuv) is the word for repentance—changing direction. Doing 'that which is lawful and right' demonstrates genuine repentance. 'He shall save his soul alive'—repentance brings salvation. This offers hope to the worst sinners.

Historical Context

Examples include Manasseh (2 Chronicles 33:12-13), Nineveh (Jonah 3), and the thief on the cross (Luke 23:42-43). No one is beyond God's reach. The gospel offers salvation to anyone who repents and believes, regardless of past wickedness. This prepares for the New Covenant promise of heart transformation (Ezekiel 36:26-27).
