

Ezekiel 23:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated from them.

Analysis

And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love describes Judah receiving what she pursued. The phrase 'bed of love' drips with irony—what she thought would be romantic alliance became violent violation. And they defiled her with their whoredom indicates the very relationship Judah sought corrupted her. Babylonian alliance required religious compromise—acknowledging Babylonian gods, adopting cultic practices. And her mind was alienated from them marks the turning point: after experiencing what she desired, Judah became disillusioned. But alienation came too late—defilement was permanent, consequences unavoidable. Sin promises satisfaction but delivers emptiness. We pursue eagerly, then recoil in disgust once possessing it—but damage is done.

Historical Context

Judah's alliance with Babylon began positively but soured as Babylonian dominance became oppressive. King Jehoiakim rebelled after three years of vassalage (2 Kings 24:1), triggering Babylonian invasion. What seemed politically and economically advantageous became destructive. The pattern repeated under Zedekiah, whose rebellion brought final judgment (2 Kings 24-25).
