

Ezekiel 23:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

Analysis

For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated repeats verse 22's pronouncement with emphasis. Repetition underscores certainty and irrevocability. God will deliver (natan—give) indicates active divine causation, not passive permission. Judah's hatred and alienation from Babylon doesn't protect her—it intensifies judgment. The very people she came to despise will dominate her. Personal feelings don't alter divine justice. Our opinions about enemies don't influence whom God uses as instruments. This is sobering: God isn't constrained by our preferences or affections. He uses even those we hate to accomplish His purposes, demonstrating absolute sovereignty.

Historical Context

By siege time, Judah thoroughly hated Babylon—their oppressive vassal requirements, heavy tribute, and military threats made them despised enemies. Yet hatred couldn't prevent Babylonian conquest. Emotion doesn't alter historical necessity when God has decreed judgment. Zedekiah's rebellion expressed this hatred but only brought fiercer punishment.
