

Ezekiel 26:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.

Analysis

And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease removes Tyre's joy and celebration. And the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard silences music—the soundtrack of prosperous life. The change from singing to silence represents the end of happiness and prosperity. When God judges, joy departs. The absence of music indicates desolation—no celebrations, no weddings, no festivals. Judgment brings mourning; blessing brings music. The presence or absence of song reflects spiritual state—silence indicates judgment.

Historical Context

Tyre was famous for luxury, entertainment, and cultural sophistication. Its markets, festivals, and celebrations were legendary. The prophecy that music would cease was fulfilled as Tyre declined from cultural capital to minor port. The songs and harps fell silent when judgment came. Later, Revelation applies similar imagery to Babylon's fall (Revelation 18:22), showing this pattern repeats across civilizations.
