

Ezekiel 26:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD: and it shall become a spoil to the nations.

Analysis

It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea predicts Tyre's reduction from commercial superpower to fishing village. For I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD seals the prophecy with divine authority. And it shall become a spoil to the nations indicates plunder by many powers. What was prosperous becomes desolate; what was proud becomes pitiful. The contrast between maritime empire and fishing nets emphasizes total reversal. God brings down proud powers and reduces them to humble subsistence. All human glory is temporary when it opposes God.

Historical Context

After Alexander's destruction (332 BC), Tyre never regained its former glory. Though rebuilt, it remained a minor port rather than the commercial empire it had been. Fishermen literally spread nets on its ruins, fulfilling Ezekiel's prophecy. The reduction from empire to fishing village demonstrates the thoroughness of divine judgment against pride.
