

Ezekiel 30:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand: but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly wounded man.

Analysis

And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down—Repetition from verse 22 emphasizes the contrast. זְרָעוֹת (zērō'ôt, 'arms') of Babylon strengthened; פֶּרֶעָה (par'ōh, Pharaoh's) תִּפְלֹנָה (tippōlēnāh, 'shall fall/drop down')—image of lifeless limbs hanging useless.

And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon—The recognition formula again. When Babylon conquers Egypt wielding YHWH's sword, both nations will acknowledge God's sovereignty. Egypt will know YHWH through defeat; Babylon will know (though not acknowledge) that her victories come from Israel's God, not Marduk. God's control of history produces knowledge of His person.

Historical Context

This prophecy was given during Jerusalem's siege (587 BC), before Egypt's invasion (568/567 BC). When it occurred exactly as predicted—Babylon strengthened, Egypt defeated—the prophetic word was vindicated. Ezekiel's credibility, established when Jerusalem fell (33:21-22), was confirmed again when Egypt fell. Fulfilled prophecy authenticates God's word and messenger.
