

Ezekiel 34:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

Analysis

"And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country." God promises comprehensive restoration: regathering from exile, return to homeland, abundant provision. The threefold promise emphasizes divine initiative. This had partial fulfillment in post-exilic return but awaits complete fulfillment in Christ's gathering elect from all nations. The Reformed view sees spiritual fulfillment: God gathering His people into the church, feeding them with Word and sacrament, providing eternal security.

Historical Context

The promise (586 BC) addressed exiles mourning dispersion. Cyrus's decree (539 BC) began fulfillment, allowing Jewish return. However, most remained scattered, and even returnees faced hardship. Complete fulfillment came through Christ gathering elect from every nation into spiritual Israel (the church). The physical geography (mountains of Israel, rivers, inhabited places) foreshadows spiritual realities: abundant provision in Christ, security in God's kingdom, eternal fellowship in new creation. What God promised Israel He fulfills expansively in the church.

Study Questions

1. How does God's promise to gather and feed encourage believers experiencing spiritual exile?
2. What is the relationship between physical restoration promises and spiritual realities in Christ?
