

Ezekiel 35:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Son of man, set thy face against mount Seir, and prophesy against it,

Analysis

God commands Ezekiel to 'set thy face against mount Seir' and 'prophesy against it'—active prophetic confrontation. Mountains in Scripture represent kingdoms and nations. Setting one's face signifies unwavering focus and determined opposition. This reveals that God's judgment isn't reluctant or uncertain but resolute and purposeful.

Historical Context

Edom occupied mountainous terrain, which they believed made them secure (Obadiah 3-4). The prophecy specifically targets their geographical stronghold, revealing that natural defenses provide no security against divine judgment.
