

Ezekiel 43:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

This is the law of the house; Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house.

Analysis

The temple law's climax—'This is the law of the house; Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house'—emphasizes comprehensive holiness. The Hebrew תּוֹרָה (torah, 'law') establishes divine standard. The phrase 'upon the top of the mountain' recalls Sinai where Moses received the law (Exodus 19-20) and suggests exalted, elevated position. The 'whole limit thereof round about' means complete boundary, nothing excluded. The double declaration ('this is the law') emphasizes importance—comprehensive holiness characterizes God's house. Reformed theology sees this as depicting the church: 'Be ye holy; for I am holy' (1 Peter 1:16). Every aspect of life under God's lordship must be holy—no secular/sacred dichotomy. Christ our temple (John 2:19-21) was perfectly holy; believers united to Him share His holiness positionally (sanctification).

Historical Context

Mountains held theological significance in Scripture: Sinai (law-giving, Exodus 19), Moriah (Abraham's offering, Genesis 22; temple site, 2 Chronicles 3:1), Carmel (Elijah's confrontation, 1 Kings 18), Transfiguration Mount (Christ's glory, Matthew 17), Zion (divine dwelling, Psalm 48:1-2), Olivet (Christ's ascension and promised return, Acts 1:9-12, Zechariah 14:4). The elevated position suggests proximity to heaven and distance from earth's corruption. The comprehensive holiness requirement ('whole limit... round about') prevented sacred core with profane periphery—all must be holy. This challenged Israel's syncretism—mixing YHWH worship with paganism. The law's emphatic repetition indicates foundational principle: God's presence demands complete consecration, not partial commitment. New Testament continues: 'present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God' (Romans 12:1).
