

Ezekiel 46:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But when the people of the land shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.

Analysis

The worship flow regulation—"he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in"—prevents congestion and maintains order. This seemingly minor detail teaches that worship requires organization, not chaos. The Hebrew סִדְרָה (seder, 'order') characterizes God's nature (1 Corinthians 14:33, 40). Worshipers must follow prescribed patterns, not individual preference. The one-way flow also symbolizes transformation—those who truly encounter God exit differently than they entered, moving forward in sanctification rather than circular stagnation. Reformed theology emphasizes the regulative principle: worship according to God's prescription, and 'let all things be done decently and in order' (1 Corinthians 14:40).

Historical Context

Ancient temple traffic management prevented chaos during major feasts when thousands gathered. Archaeological evidence from large ancient Near Eastern temples shows similar traffic flow patterns. Solomon's temple featured multiple gates and courts accommodating large crowds (2 Chronicles 4:9). The requirement to exit through a different gate than entry prevented bottlenecks and maintained crowd flow. This practical detail demonstrates that God cares about worship logistics, not just theology. When Nehemiah organized post-exilic worship, he assigned gatekeepers and organized processions (Nehemiah 12:27-43). Paul's instructions for orderly worship (1 Corinthians 11-14) continue this principle—Spirit-filled worship maintains order, not confusion. The early church's growth required organizational structure (Acts 6:1-7), balancing spiritual vitality with practical administration.
