

Ezekiel 5:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.

Analysis

Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them. God commands Ezekiel to divide his shaved hair into precise thirds, each representing Jerusalem's population fate. The first third burned "in the midst of the city" (betokh ha-ir, בְּתוֹךְ הַעִיר) symbolizes death by fire, famine, and pestilence during siege. The second third smitten "about it with a knife" represents death by sword during the city's fall. The final third "scattered in the wind" depicts exile and dispersion.

The threefold division demonstrates comprehensive judgment—no escape exists; every possibility ends in death or exile. Yet even exile offers no safety: "I will draw out a sword after them" (arik acharehem charev, אָרֵיךְ אַחֲרֵיכֶם חֶרֶב). God's pursuing sword follows the scattered remnant, ensuring judgment reaches even refugees. This echoes Amos 9:1-4—no hiding place exists from divine wrath.

The mathematical precision (one-third, one-third, one-third) emphasizes God's sovereign control and perfect justice. Nothing occurs by chance; each person's fate fulfills divine decree. This anticipates Jesus' teaching that God numbers even the hairs on our heads (Luke 12:7)—nothing escapes divine knowledge and sovereign ordering. The terror is that this sovereign precision here serves judgment; the gospel comfort is that the same sovereignty works all things for believers' good (Romans 8:28).

Historical Context

Ezekiel's prophecy came true with devastating accuracy during Jerusalem's fall (586 BC). Historical records confirm that approximately one-third of Jerusalem's population died during the 18-month siege from famine, disease, and fire. When Babylon breached the walls, approximately one-third died by sword in the ensuing slaughter. The final third was exiled to Babylon, though even there many faced execution or death.

Jeremiah's parallel account confirms these proportions: "A third part of you shall die of pestilence and be consumed with famine in your midst; a third part shall fall by the sword all around you; and a third part I will scatter to all the winds" (Jeremiah 15:2; cf. Zechariah 13:8-9). The prophetic word proved precise in fulfillment.

The 'sword drawn after' the exiles manifested in various ways: some exiles were executed by Babylonians; others died in subsequent rebellions or purges; Jewish refugees who fled to Egypt were pursued there by Babylonian armies (Jeremiah 43-44). No refuge provided safety when God decreed judgment. The only safety lay in repentance and submission to God's disciplining hand.

Study Questions

1. How does the precise division of Jerusalem's fate demonstrate God's sovereign control even in judgment?
2. What does the 'sword drawn after' exiles teach about the impossibility of fleeing from God?
3. In what ways does this comprehensive judgment drive us to seek refuge in Christ alone?
