

Ezra 2:55

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The children of Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Peruda,

Analysis

---

The children of Solomon's servants (בְּנֵי עֲבָדֵי שְׁלֹמֹה)—A distinct category from Nethinim, these were descendants of Canaanite peoples Solomon subjected to forced labor (1 Kings 9:20-21). Sotai means "straying," Sophereth (סוֹפֶרֶת) means "scribe" or "numberer," and Peruda means "kernel" or "separated."

That avdei Shlomo (Solomon's slaves) maintained distinct identity for 500+ years is remarkable. Their voluntary return from exile—where they lived as free men—to resume temple service demonstrates covenant loyalty transcending their servile origins. Paul later applies this metaphor: Christians are "bondservants of Christ" (Romans 1:1), finding true freedom in voluntary service.

Historical Context

Solomon employed forced labor from conquered Canaanite populations (Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, Jebusites) for temple construction and other projects. Unlike the Nethinim (given to temple service), Solomon's servants performed royal and civil duties. Their descendants' inclusion in the return census shows full integration into post-exilic Judean society.

Study Questions

1. What does the voluntary return of Solomon's servants teach about finding identity in service rather than freedom from obligation?
2. How does this passage challenge modern individualism's emphasis on autonomy over covenant community?
3. In what ways are you a voluntary bondservant of Christ, embracing servanthood as freedom?
