

Ezra 2:65

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and there were among them two hundred singing men and singing women.

Analysis

Additional count: 'Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven.' Including servants shows the total community was nearly 50,000. The servants' inclusion demonstrates that the restoration community wasn't exclusively ethnic Israel but included those economically connected. The distinction between primary returnees and servants maintains social categories while including both in the counted community.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern households commonly included servants—some of foreign origin, others fellow Israelites in debt service. The 7,337 servants represent significant population beyond the 42,360 primary returnees. Their inclusion in the count shows they were part of the restoration community. Archaeological evidence shows Persian-period settlements were modest, suggesting this population represented significant proportion of Judah's total inhabitants. The community faced enormous rebuilding challenges with this relatively small workforce.
