

Ezra 9:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness;
and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

Analysis

The 'evening sacrifice' (about 3 PM) was one of the two daily tamid offerings. Ezra chose this time deliberately—when the community gathered for sacrifice, his public prayer would have maximum impact and participation. Rising 'from my heaviness' (Hebrew ta'anit, meaning humiliation/affliction) shows Ezra emerging from mourning to intercession. His posture—'fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God'—combines physical humility (kneeling) with supplication (spread hands). This embodied prayer demonstrates that physical posture can appropriately express heart attitude. Ezra's personal identification—'my God'—shows intimate relationship even while confessing corporate sin. The prayer that follows is one of Scripture's great penitential prayers.

Historical Context

The evening sacrifice time ensured maximum participation in Ezra's prayer. The gathered community would hear and join his confession. Ancient Hebrew prayer often involved bodily posture—standing (1 Samuel 1:26), kneeling (1 Kings 8:54), or prostrating (Genesis 17:3). The raising of hands symbolized both supplication (receiving from God) and consecration (offering to God). Ezra's public prayer at the regular sacrifice time linked his intercession to the ongoing sacrificial system, showing that sacrifice alone without repentance was insufficient. His prayer would continue through verses 6-15, providing theological interpretation of the crisis and calling for covenant renewal.
