

Galatians 1:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

Analysis

For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ. Paul answers an accusation: that he's a people-pleaser who softens the gospel for Gentile audiences. "Do I now persuade men, or God?" (the Greek syntax is difficult—likely "Am I now seeking human approval or God's?"). The obvious answer: God's approval alone matters. "Or do I seek to please men?" (ē zētō anthrōpois areskein) asks directly what motivates him.

"For if I yet pleased men" (ei eti anthrōpois ēreskon) suggests past accusations that Paul once preached circumcision (5:11). "Yet" or "still" (eti) implies change. Before Damascus, Pharisee Saul pleased men by persecuting the church; now Apostle Paul pleases God by proclaiming free grace. The conditional structure makes pleasing men and serving Christ mutually exclusive.

"I should not be the servant of Christ" (Christou doulos ouk an ēmēn)—doulos (δοῦλος) means "slave," not mere servant. Christ's slaves have no freedom to accommodate the message to human preference. The Judaizers' gospel was digestible to Jewish sensibilities; Paul's gospel of grace offended Jewish pride and Gentile moral philosophy. Gospel faithfulness costs popularity.

Historical Context

The Judaizers likely accused Paul of teaching circumcision to Jews (Acts 16:3, 21:20-24) while omitting it for Gentiles—theological inconsistency for pragmatic success. Paul's letters show he became "all things to all men" (1 Corinthians 9:22) in nonessentials but never compromised gospel core. His refusal to circumcise Titus (2:3) demonstrated principle over popularity. In patronage culture, teachers depended on pleasing benefactors for financial support. Paul's tent-making ministry (Acts 18:3) freed him from this pressure, allowing prophetic boldness.

Study Questions

1. Where are you tempted to soften biblical truth to gain approval, avoid conflict, or maintain relationships?
2. In what ways does financial independence or dependence affect your freedom to speak unpopular truth?
3. What does it mean practically to be Christ's slave rather than men's servant in your workplace, family, or church?
