

Galatians 5:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.

Analysis

But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law. The contrast between Spirit-leading and law-obligation. "But if ye be led of the Spirit" (ei de pneumatia gesthe, εἰ δὲ πνεύματι ἄγεσθε)—if you're led/guided by the Spirit. Present passive: continually being led. Agō (ἄγω) means to lead, guide, bring. The Spirit actively directs believers' lives. This is relational guidance, not external compulsion—intimate leading by indwelling Person.

"Ye are not under the law" (ouk este hypo nomon, οὐκ ἐστὲ ὑπὸ νόμου)—you're not under law's jurisdiction, authority, condemnation, or obligation as way of life. This doesn't mean lawlessness but freedom from law as operating principle. Spirit-led living fulfills law's moral intent (5:14) without being enslaved to law. The Spirit writes God's will on hearts (Jeremiah 31:33, 2 Corinthians 3:3), producing from within what law commanded from without. This is new covenant reality: internal divine enablement replacing external legal demand.

Historical Context

This verse encapsulates new covenant transformation. Old covenant: external law requiring obedience, producing guilt when failed. New covenant: internal Spirit producing obedience, creating desire for holiness. Believers aren't antinomian (lawless) but supernatural law-keepers through the Spirit. This challenges both legalists (who can't conceive of morality without legal coercion) and liberals (who reject moral absolutes). Paul presents third way: objective morality (God's unchanging will) subjectively internalized and empowered by the Spirit. Freedom from law doesn't mean freedom to sin but freedom to obey joyfully.
