

Haggai 1:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.

Analysis

Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways (וְעַתָּה כֹּה־אָמַר יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת שִׁימוּ לְבַבְכֶּם עַל־דַּרְכֵיכֶם/ve'attah koh-amar YHWH Tzeva'ot simu levavkhem al-darkhekem)—after exposing their misplaced priorities (v.4), God commands self-examination. 'Consider' (שִׁימוּ לְבַבְכֶּם/simu levavkhem) literally means 'set your heart upon'—not casual thought but serious reflection. 'Your ways' (דַּרְכֵיכֶם/darkhekem) encompasses their entire pattern of life: choices, priorities, values, actions.

The LORD of hosts (יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת/YHWH Tzeva'ot)—this title emphasizes God's sovereignty over heavenly and earthly armies. The One commanding self-examination is the Almighty, not a peer offering suggestions. His authority demands response. The command to 'consider your ways' appears twice (v.5, v.7), framing the diagnosis of their futility (v.6). God first calls for self-examination, then provides analysis, then repeats the call—ensuring they cannot avoid honest assessment.

Historical Context

Self-examination was necessary because the people had grown accustomed to their situation. Sixteen years of neglecting the temple while pursuing personal prosperity had dulled spiritual sensitivity. They didn't recognize the connection between their futility (v.6) and their priorities (v.4). God's call to 'consider your ways' invited them to trace effects back to causes: their economic struggles stemmed from spiritual disobedience. This principle operates throughout Scripture—prosperity divorced from obedience leads to emptiness (Deuteronomy 28, Proverbs 3:9-10, Malachi 3:8-12). Jesus similarly warned against storing earthly treasures while neglecting heavenly treasure (Matthew 6:19-21).
