

Hebrews 11:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Analysis

Abraham's tent dwelling was purposeful—he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.' He sought something more permanent than earthly real estate. The 'city which hath foundations' contrasts with tents (temporary) and points to the heavenly Jerusalem (12:22; Revelation 21:2). His faith looked beyond present circumstances to eternal realities prepared by God.

Historical Context

Abraham left the city of Ur to seek God's city. This reversal—trading human civilization for divine promise—demonstrates faith's priorities. The patriarchs' pilgrim lifestyle testified to their hope in God's eternal city.
