

Hebrews 12:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

Analysis

For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. The command 'consider' (analogisasthe, ἀναλογίσασθε, 'reckon up' or 'compare carefully') calls believers to meditate deeply on Christ's endurance. He faced ultimate 'contradiction of sinners'—rejection, mockery, false accusation, betrayal, abandonment, and crucifixion. When tempted to grow weary under persecution, believers should compare their suffering with Christ's, finding both perspective and motivation.

The danger is becoming 'wearied and faint in your minds' (kamēte tais psychais hymōn eklyomenoi, κάμητε ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ἐκλυόμενοι, 'growing tired in your souls, losing heart'). Mental and spiritual exhaustion under prolonged trial can lead to abandoning faith. The antidote is fixing attention on Christ's greater suffering and perfect endurance. He faced infinitely worse opposition yet completed His mission without wavering.

This illustrates a fundamental gospel principle: Christ's work provides both example and enablement. We look to Him as pattern of faithful endurance, but also as the one who endured for us, accomplishing our salvation. His perfect obedience under suffering satisfies divine justice on our behalf and provides power through His Spirit for our own perseverance (Philippians 2:12-13). Meditation on Christ's passion both shames our complaints and strengthens our resolve.

Historical Context

Christ endured the ultimate contradiction—the sinless Son of God rejected by those He came to save, condemned by religious leaders who should have recognized Him, crucified by Roman authority meant to establish justice. The original readers, facing persecution from both Jewish and Roman sources, needed encouragement that their suffering was lighter than Christ's. Early Christian tradition records many first-century martyrdoms; believers needed endurance to maintain faith through extended opposition. Fixing attention on Christ's greater suffering provided both comfort (He understands) and challenge (don't give up when you haven't suffered as He did).
