

Hebrews 13:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation.

Analysis

Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation. This verse commands respect for spiritual leaders who faithfully taught God's Word. 'Remember' (mnēmoneuete, μνημονεύετε) means actively recalling and honoring them. 'Have the rule over you' (hēgoumenōn, ἡγουμένων, 'leading' or 'guiding') describes pastoral oversight, particularly those who 'spoken unto you the word of God' (elalēsan hymin ton logon tou theou)—faithful Bible teachers and preachers.

'Whose faith follow' (hōn mimēsthe tēn pistin, ὧν μιμεῖσθε τὴν πίστιν, 'imitate their faith') calls for emulating their trust in God and doctrinal faithfulness. The phrase 'considering the end of their conversation' (anatheōrountes tēn ekbasin tēs anastrophēs) means observing the outcome or result of their lifestyle. If their faithful teaching and living resulted in God's blessing (or faithful endurance despite suffering), this validates their example worth following.

This teaches proper regard for godly pastoral leadership—not celebrity worship or unquestioning obedience, but respect for those who faithfully teach Scripture and model Christ-like faith. Reformed theology emphasizes the regulative principle that church leaders' authority derives from faithfulness to God's Word, not ecclesiastical office alone. We honor leaders who teach truth and live consistently with it. Their faith-filled endurance, especially unto death (martyrdom), provides powerful example for succeeding generations.

Historical Context

The past tense ('who have spoken') and emphasis on 'the end of their conversation' suggests these leaders had died, possibly as martyrs. Early Christian tradition records numerous first-century martyrdoms—Stephen, James son of Zebedee, James the Lord's brother, Peter, Paul, and many others. The original readers would have known faithful teachers who died for the faith, whose completed lives demonstrated persevering faith worth emulating. Later Christian generations similarly honored martyrs and faithful teachers like Polycarp, Ignatius, and others whose deaths validated their teaching. This verse established pattern of honoring faithful leaders' memory and following their example, particularly their endurance unto death.

Study Questions

1. Who are faithful spiritual teachers in your life whose faith you should imitate, and how are you doing so?
2. What 'end of their conversation'—life outcomes—validates these leaders' faith as worth following?
3. How should you honor the memory and example of faithful Christians who've gone before, especially martyrs?
