

Hebrews 3:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

Analysis

The warning against hardening hearts recalls Israel's rebellion at Massah and Meribah (Exodus 17, Numbers 20). The Greek 'sklērynēte' (harden) can be reflexive - don't harden yourselves. This assumes human responsibility in belief/unbelief, though Reformed theology also affirms God's sovereign grace in softening hearts. The 'provocation' (Greek 'parapikrasmou') refers to bitter rebellion against God.

Historical Context

Massah and Meribah were watershed moments where Israel tested God by demanding water. These incidents became paradigmatic examples of unbelief in Jewish tradition, used to warn subsequent generations.
