

Hebrews 3:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

Analysis

Israel tested God 'and saw my works forty years' - unbelief persisted despite constant evidence of God's power and provision. The Greek 'dokimazō' (tested) implies challenging God to prove Himself. This demonstrates the irrationality of unbelief - even abundant evidence doesn't compel faith apart from God's grace. Reformed epistemology recognizes that the problem is not lack of evidence but the noetic effects of sin.

Historical Context

The forty years refers to Israel's wilderness wandering after refusing to enter Canaan (Numbers 14). Despite daily manna, water from rocks, and God's presence in the cloud, the generation that left Egypt died in unbelief.

Study Questions

1. Why doesn't evidence alone produce faith?
2. What 'works' of God have you witnessed that should strengthen your faith?
