

Hebrews 4:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:

Analysis

---

The logic: since rest remains available, and the original generation failed to enter through disobedience, the promise extends to subsequent generations. The Greek 'apoleleitai' (remains) indicates ongoing availability. Reformed covenant theology sees this as demonstrating the unity of God's redemptive purpose across testaments - the gospel was preached to them (4:2), but only those with faith benefit from it.

Historical Context

This argument would resonate with Jewish Christians who might think salvation was limited to ancient Israel. The author shows God's purpose to bring many into rest continues beyond the original generation.

Study Questions

1. How does God's persistent offer of rest despite human failure demonstrate His grace?
2. What is the relationship between the 'rest' offered to Israel and the rest offered in Christ?
