

Hebrews 6:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

Analysis

The continuation of verse 4's description adds 'tasted the good word of God' (Greek 'rhema theou'—the spoken word) and 'powers of the world to come' (miracles and gifts characteristic of the messianic age). These individuals had extensive exposure to Christianity's realities without exercising saving faith. Tasting without swallowing pictures proximity without possession.

Historical Context

The early church witnessed miraculous signs and the Spirit's powerful work. Some, like Simon Magus (Acts 8:9-24), observed these realities without true conversion, desiring the benefits without submission to Christ.
