

Hosea 10:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

They have spoken words, swearing falsely in making a covenant: thus judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field.

Analysis

Empty words and false covenants: 'They have spoken words, swearing falsely in making a covenant: thus judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field.' They speak דִּבְרוּ דְּבָרִים (dibberu devarim, spoken words)—mere talk without substance. Swearing falsely (אָלוֹת שָׁוָא, alot shav) when cutting covenant (כְּרִית בְּרִית, karot berit). Result: judgment springs up כָּרָאֵשׁ (kharosh, like hemlock/poisonous weed) in furrows. This demonstrates that faithless words and broken covenants produce poisonous fruit. Truth and covenant faithfulness are foundational; their absence poisons society. Only Christ speaks truth perfectly (John 14:6), establishing new covenant on better promises (Hebrews 8:6).

Historical Context

Israel's political instability involved constant treaty-making and breaking: swearing allegiance to Assyria then Egypt, making covenants with no intention of keeping them. 'False swearing' violates the third commandment (Exodus 20:7) and characterizes dishonest society (Jeremiah 5:2, 7:9, Zechariah 5:4). The agricultural metaphor—poisonous hemlock in plowed furrows—describes ironic reversal: where wholesome crops should grow, poison sprouts. Similarly, where justice should flourish, corruption spreads. Amos similarly condemns: 'ye have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit of righteousness into hemlock' (Amos 6:12). This demonstrates that societal corruption begins with leaders' faithless words and broken promises.
