

Hosea 4:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood.

Analysis

This verse catalogs covenant violations using the Decalogue's structure: 'swearing' (false oaths, violating God's name—3rd commandment), 'lying' (false witness—9th commandment), 'killing' (6th commandment), 'stealing' (8th commandment), 'committing adultery' (7th commandment). The Hebrew rhythm emphasizes comprehensive lawlessness: 'aloh we-kahhesh we-ratsohh we-ganobh we-na'oph (cursing and lying and murdering and stealing and adultery). The phrase 'they break out' (paratsu) suggests violent overflow—sin unchecked, society descending into chaos. 'Blood touches blood' (damim be-damim naga'u) indicates unceasing bloodshed, one murder following another. This total moral collapse demonstrates what happens when knowledge of God vanishes (v. 1)—without reverence for YHWH, all ethical restraints dissolve.

Historical Context

Israel's final decades were marked by political assassinations (six kings in 30 years, most murdered), corrupt justice, oppression of the poor, and religious syncretism. The social fabric disintegrated as covenant structures collapsed. Hosea's indictment echoes the pre-flood era ('violence filled the earth,' Genesis 6:11) and Judges period ('everyone did what was right in his own eyes,' Judges 21:25). Archaeological evidence from this period shows military buildup and fortifications suggesting pervasive violence. This moral chaos preceded Assyria's devastating invasion (722 BC), demonstrating that national sin invites divine judgment through historical processes.
